Giant Corporate Interests
Want U. S. To Manage
Affairs

BUT TEMPORARILY

Appeal for Action to Conserve Reserves; Stimulate Industry

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 29.—The strange spectacle of the oil industry asking the Federal Government to manage its affairs temporarily, was presented here today.

Representatives of the giant corporate interests, independent producers and oil producing states' governors joined in an appeal to Secretary of the Interior Ickes for a virtual dictator, Federally appointed.

Their appeal for drastic action to conserve the oil reserves, maintain fair prices and stimulate the industry, came after they failed, in two days, to agree on a program based on the co-operation of the state with the industry. The final program was regarded as tentative by Ickes. He called the committee of 15 of the majority of the representatives to appear before him by 11 a. m. and asked that all the 100 delegates to the conference call at noon.

Ickes indicated he leaned toward approval of the basic plan, embodied in the proposal.

At the outset of the conference which he called for the purpose of formulating the oil industry's important program, he announced something drastic would be done.

Reasons Given For Economic Boycott Against The Jews

BERLIN, Germany, Mar. 29.—The sweeping Nazi party's economic boycott against Jews in Germany was organized to prevent "spontaneous independent measures which were likely to assume uncontrollable proportions," Chancellor Adolph Hitler told his cabinet today.

"The boycott had to be organized," Hitler said. "We now have the action in our hands."

"World Jewry should realize that the Jewish war against Germany can only hit German Jews."

The German press generally, hailed the boycott, officially scheduled to begin at 10 a. m., Saturday, as a "defensive measure."

Various newspapers expressed hopes that "Jewish anti-propaganda in foreign countries would cease in time to permit Nazi party leaders to call off the boycott before it gets under way officially."

Commenting on the situation, the democratic newspaper Dorsen Zeitung charged that foreign propaganda was causing German Jews to be affected both at home and abroad.

In his speech to his cabinet, Hitler charged that anti-German propaganda was continuing in Great Britain and the United States despite steps taken by the government and independent organizations to stem it.

Nazi storm troopers in various parts of Germany continued their preliminary measures in anticipation of the boycott, placing placards on the windows of Jewish shops urging the place be boycotted.

DORRANCE TAX NOW READY

Philadelphia, March 29.—The Commonwealth today was prepared to make an immediate collection of $14,394,698 inheritance tax on the $115,000,000 estate of the late Dr. John T. Dorrance, head of the Campbell Soup Company, the last legal barrier having been removed by the State Supreme Court. The Supreme Court today returned its extensive record in the case to the Orphans' Court of Delaware County for execution. It handed down its final order in the case directing that the Orphans' Court modify its tax assessment along the lines of an agreement reached with the executors of the estate by Attorney General William A. Schnader.

At the same time, Attorney General W. H. Stevens of New Jersey asked the State Prerogative Court of Trenton to dismiss the appeal of the executors from an assessment of $16,000,000 in inheritance in that State.

After a long legal battle, the State Supreme Court was upheld by the United States Supreme Court in its decision that Dr. Dorrance was legally domiciled at Radnor, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, rather than in Cinnaminson Township, New Jersey, and that the Keystone State should collect the inheritance tax.

PLANS LEGISLATION TO PROTECT SMALL INVESTOR

By George E. Durno

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Mar. 29.—(INS)—The administration will move today to afford the small investor a greater measure of protection he has long needed in the stock market.

President Roosevelt has had experts studying the problem for some time. This afternoon, he expects to send to Congress a special message which, according to informal announcement, "will pertain to the sale of new securities."

At an early date, a more comprehensive legislative proposal involving regulation of the stock market itself is expected to go forward from the White House.

Today's message will be confined to floatation of new issues of stocks and bonds. Full publicity, with withdrawal of use of the mails from any concern violating the proposed new regulations, probably will be the weapon suggested by Mr. Roosevelt in curbing unscrupulous promoters from un-

HIGHWAY PATROL TO INSTRUCT IN SAFETY WORK

Organizing Schools in Lower
Section of Bucks County

START AT YARDLEY

Patrols Have Long Been A Feature in Bristol
Schools

Organization of school safety patrols with weekly inspections by members of the State highway patrol stationed at South Langhorne, have been inaugurated in some of the towns in lower end of Bucks County.

Safety patrols have been a feature of the Bristol schools ever since the organization here of a Department of Public Safety under the direction of James L. McGee, superintendent. Children in both the public and parochial schools here are organized and patrols function every day. Inspections are made and talks given at frequent intervals. At the end of the school season promotions are made of those in the patrol and merit badges awarded.

Patrolman B. J. Coughlin, State Highway Patrol, is in charge of the work started by the highway patrol. He appeared before teachers and members of the Yardley School safety patrol. The responsibilities of the position were discussed, and numerous questions asked and answered.

The aid of the Yardley Parent-Teacher Association will be enlisted so that badges and other equipment can be provided. Under the new plan, Patrolman Coughlin will make an inspection of the Yardley school patrol once a week and give other assistance in the work.

Other schools in lower Bucks County will be given an opportunity to organize along similar lines. Corporal R. D. Evans will extend the offer to the various schools and assist in organizing patrols. In each case, a patrolman will be assigned to supervise the work and provide a weekly inspection. The safety patrol system has not been extended in Bucks county outside of Bristol as widely as in many counties of New Jersey, whose system is being duplicated in part by the highway patrol.

RED CROSS DISTRIBUTES 2300 GARMENTS LOCALLY

Needy of Bristol and Vicinity Receive Clothing and Flour

WOMEN HERE SEWING

Among the needy of Bristol and vicinity there have been distributed since December 15th by the American Red Cross 2,300 garments. These consignments of clothing included articles of apparel for men, women and children.

In addition to this there was received in November for distribution in the area 4,104 bags of flour (24½ lbs. each); December, 5,002 bags; January, 5,040 bags; February and March, 3,624.

Distribution of the clothing was in charge of Mrs. S. Phillips Landreth, chairman of Bristol Red Cross, assisted by Mrs. Louis C. Spring, vice chairman. The latter had charge of the flour distribution.

Mrs. Landreth supervised the making of garments for the Red Cross by groups of women here. Materials cut to the desired patterns were received by the local branch, and then made up by Bristol women and returned to headquarters. Requisition slips were filled in for garments needed here, and consignments followed.

Under direction of Mrs. Landreth and other interested persons 200 garments have been made by women in Bristol, Edgely, Emille and Croynod, this winter. There are at present 100 articles of clothing distributed among many sewers in the area.

More than a half million articles of clothing for infants, children and adults have been distributed during the past three months by the South-eastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the Red Cross, with the aid and co-operation of 12 Welfare Organizations in Philadelphia and 42 of the chapter's branches in the adjoining counties of Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Bucks, according to a quarterly statement issued by J. Franklin McFadden, chairman of the chapter.

Twelve depots, 19 of which were established by the Clothing Division Committee of the Philadelphia County Relief Board, have been set up in Philadelphia alone, according to the report.

Of the garments distributed, the report states, 76,446 were made in Philadelphia and four surrounding counties, by a volunteer army composed of more than 5,000 women, who have voluntarily given their services to assist the organization in combating suffering caused by lack of proper clothing during the cold winter months. The remainder of the 501,777 garments were received from the National Red Cross organization in exchange for raw cotton given to the Red Cross by Congress. A corps of 300 Red Cross volunteer workers were assigned to the various depots to assist in distribution.

In addition to the distribution of clothing, the report points out, the local chapter has given away over eighteen million pounds of flour since last March, and is distributing now at the rate of over 750,000 pounds of flour per week to destitute families in Philadelphia and surrounding counties. The report shows that about 350,000 persons in over 70,000 families are now receiving weekly flour allotments. This is the equivalent of over 44,000,000 pounds of bread since last March. George W. Wilkins is chairman of the Red Cross Flour Committee.

SEVEN HUNDRED JAM COURT; HEAR OF SHERIFF'S SALE

100 Farmers Have Opportunity to Tell Their side of
The Case

THE HANZELL AFFAIR

Judges Threaten to Clear the Court; State's Witnesses
Are Cheered

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 29.—More than 100 farmers invaded Bucks County Court today to tell their side of the story in the sale of Jacob Hanzell's farm and personal property for $1.18 to satisfy a judgment foreclosure.

About 700 spectators jammed their way inside while several hundred others were unable to obtain admittance.

Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner of Bucks County had previously presented arguments in support of his plea that the sale should be set aside because of the tactics of the Bucks County Farmers' Protective Association which stifled all bidding at the sale, according to his allegations.

Peter Kodaz, Paul Gross and J. Seitzley, members of the bidding committee bid in Hanzell's property valued at about $800 and turned it over to him on a 99 year lease for $1 rental.

Sheriff's deputies and state police in plain clothes were stationed at strategic points in the court room to guard against possible violence and rioting.

Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer several times threatened to clear the court room when state witnesses were applauded and cheered by the spectators.

Louis Bentzley, the first witness, and Philip L. Smith, a wealthy dairyman, testified the sale was conducted in an orderly manner and that they saw no intimidation or violence.

Bentzley, a resident of Dublin, said he was president of the Farmers' Association.

He said he saw Webster Achey, attorney for Jacob Laufersweiler, the plaintiff, purchase the first four articles at the sale for a total of 30c. He said they were worth at least $45.

"No one laid a hand on Achey," the witness said.

He testified there were no threats voiced against prospective bidders.

Bentzley described himself as the spokesman for the farmers and told the Court he had been asked to appoint a committee of three to bid in Hanzell's property.

The witness said he conferred with Achey on the proposal and that the attorney told him he could not "trust" the farmers.

Officers of the Farmers' Association received no salary, Bentzley said.

He admitted soliciting farmers in the district to attend the sale and asking them to refrain from bidding.

"It is part of our platform and the platform of the national organization of which we are a unit, to oppose sheriff's sales on farms at this time," he declared.

"It is our policy to buy the property as cheaply as possible and then turn it over to the owner again."

The witness said he attended the sale out of "sympathy" for Hanzell and his family.

He was loudly applauded and cheered as he left the stand.

The demonstration drew a severe reprimand from the judges.

Smith was the only other witness at the morning session.

He said he returned from Russia where he had recently made a study of economic conditions. The dairyman told the judges he found Hanzell's family in a pitiful plight when he visited them on their farm home. He said Mrs. Hanzell was ill and the children underfed.

Smith testified he heard no threats at the sale and also there was no violence.

At this point Judge Keller took over the questioning.

"You are a college graduate, are you not?" the Jurist asked.

Smith replied in the affirmative.

BEATRICE BURTON DEFENDS "EYES THAT WON'T SEE"

"She must be blind! The poor girl—she doesn't realize how her husband is carrying on! How can she tolerate it?"

Those words Beatrice Burton maintains are frequently heard in every community—particularly among the young married crowd with its roots in skyscraper offices and commuting trains and "efficiency" apartments.

But they don't mean anything, Miss Burton contends. What of it—even if the young wife does refuse to smother the marriage with abrupt and indignant action, as soon as she finds out her husband has clay feet, after all? Perhaps—and this is what Miss Burton attempts to show in "Mary Faith," her new popular serial—perhaps the reclamation of a wandering husband may be worth the wounded pride and suffering.

Kim and Mary Faith were young people like many another couple in the land. Kim worked hard in a study office, trying to get on. Mary Faith worked hard in a stuffy office, too, but she realized, like most of her sisters, that she was marking time—waiting for her Prince Charming to come along and rescue her. She thought she had found him in Kim.

Kim was restless, nervous, adventurous, with an eye for every pretty girl who came along. Mary Faith didn't see what her eyes showed her at first; and when she did, she reasoned that perhaps it was better not to see.

Her friends couldn't understand her. The truth is, that apparently idyllic marriage of hers did veer disastrously toward almost all the modern crags upon which romance is in the habit of wrecking itself. Humdrum domesticity. The other girl who remained in the office and saw Kim all day. The thirst for high adventure and new faces which coursed in Kim. Modern ideas.

TALKING TO THE PUBLIC

While denying reports that President Roosevelt had decided to make regular radio talks twice a month, the White House said he would broadcast as frequently as circumstances warrant. The favorable reception given his radio discussion of the banking situation was responsible for this decision.

The conclusion is to be drawn from the White House statement that Mr. Roosevelt will appeal directly to the public for support in any projected policies that seem endangered by congressional opposition or the purpose of which the people do not understand.

This course is a commendable one and will receive popular approval. Other presidents have, at times, found it to their advantage to take their cases directly to the people. The radio is an excellent medium for this. Mr. Hoover made use of it occasionally but to no great extent and mainly for scheduled addresses of a general nature.

President Roosevelt is represented as believing that the radio offers unusual opportunities to an executive, in the consolidation of public opinion behind any program or plans he is especially anxious to see succeed. In this view, he is evidently right.

A president who takes the people into his confidence by a frank discussion of his problems with them in their homes is much more likely to win their good will and support than would be the case by embracing his views in a formal message to Congress.

BEER QUICKLY ON TAP

The country need have no fear of having to wait for its beer now that the Volstead act is amended to permit the sale of this product.

This comforting assurance comes from Joseph Dubin, editor of Brewers Age and a man who should know what he is talking about. Beer has to be aged before it is marketable. A million barrels already aged is ready for the retailers, according to Mr. Dubin.

"There are 145 licensed beer breweries," he explains, "These breweries have in storage from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 barrels of brew. To place this on sale merely involves a slight change in the de-alcoholizing process used to produce near beer. The de-alcoholizing process follows the aging period."

"As a result, there are at least 1,000,000 barrels properly aged ready to be distributed immediately through existing retail outlets."

All of which will prove encouraging news to those who want beer.

If the explorers are seeking unknown lands to explore, how about some of those minor league ball parks this season?

Hint to young professional men: The one sure way to have clients today is to decide not to shave this morning.

Of course there will be a business revival. The old-fashioned revival was always successful if the folks repented and felt lost.

A new "preventive of old age" has proved successful. The autopsies disclosed that the inventor, who experimented on himself, will grow no older.

CHAPTER FIFTY-TWO

Bundry turned his clay-colored face to de Bernis, thrusting out a lip and shrugging his disgust.

"I've done what I could, Charley. You've heard."

Monsieur de Bernis was very solemn. "I've heard. I understand it is finished, then." He too, shrugged. "The fortune of war." Himself he lifted over his head the silver-encrusted baldric that carried his sword, and proffered it to Sharples in token of surrender.

The Lieutenant took it, inclining his head a little in acknowledgment, and handed it to one of his men who stood by the bow of the stranded longboat.

"And now Tom Leach, if you please," he said, looking round as he spoke, wondering, perhaps, that he had not yet seen that redoubtable pirate, and that he should not have been present at this parley.

"As, yes," said Bundry grimly. "Tom Leach, to be sure." He hesitated a moment, his piercing eyes upon the fair young face of the Lieutenant. "Dead or alive was the condition," he said, between question and assertion.

Lieutenant Sharples stared. "What? Is he dead already?"

Bundry nodded, turned, and started off up the beach towards the massed buccaners and what lay behind them, screened by them.

Monsieur de Bernis went after him, caught and held him a moment by the shoulder whilst he murmured something to him. It was something that made that pallid mask momentarily change its set expression. Then, with a grin and a nod, Bundry went on, and de Bernis came slowly back, and at a word from Sharples entered the waiting boat.

Watching ever from the red bulwarks of the Royal Mary, Priscilla saw and understood. A little moan escaped her.

"The cowards! The treacherous cowards!" she cried. "They have surrendered him. Surrendered him to save their vile skins."

The Major, careful to betray no satisfaction, answered colourlessly. "Naturally. Could anything else have been expected of them?" He set an arm about her to steady and comfort her as she faltered there, suddenly overcome, her senses swimming.

Tenderly he supported her as far as the main hatch, and gently lowered her to sit upon the coaming. There, with her elbows on her knees, she took her head in her hands, abandoning herself to silent misery. The Major sat down beside her, and his arm was soothingly placed again about her shoulders. He could go so far as to stifle jealous resentment of this overwhelming grief. But he had no consoling words to offer her.

An officer, pacing by the rail of the quarter-deck, looked down upon them, as did, too, from the other side, some of the hands lounging on the fore-castle. But Miss Priscilla heeded nobody and nothing. Grief and horror dazed her senses. It was as if some part of her had been violently wrenched away.

She was aroused at last by the gusty passage of the large gaudy figure of the Admiral, who crossed the waist with elephantine tread, a couple of men following him. As in a dream she remembered having just heard someone say that Sharples was returning. She looked up to see Sir Henry reach the bulwarks and then she heard his brazen voice raised in passion.

"Where the devil's Leach, then? Sharples hasn't got him, after all. Damn him for a fool! Below there, Aldersly. Bid Benjamin stand by with his gun-crew. He'll be needed in a moment. I'll shoot them all to bits! I'll teach the dogs! Do they think they can get gay with Henry Morgan?"

He leaned far over the bulwarks to speak to someone immediately below.

"What the devil's this, Sharples? Where's Tom Leach?"

"A moment, Sir Henry!" sang the lieutenant's voice from below.

The boat scraped and bumped against the sides of the Royal Mary as it brought up at the foot of the ladder. A pause followed, and then the staring, fearful eyes of Priscilla beheld the figure of Monsieur de Bernis gradually rising above the bulwarks, until he stood there, steadying himself by a ratline, at the head of the entrance-ladder. Calm and smiling, as she had ever known him in the face of every peril, did he now appear.

It was incredible that a man should meet his fate so gallantly.

Sir Henry, standing below him and a little aside, looked up to meet the Frenchman's debonaire smile with a scowl, whilst the head and shoulders of de Bernis' servant, Pierre, began to come into view as he climbed close in his master's wake.

"Where the devil is Leach, then?" Sir Henry trumpeted. "What does this mean?"

Steadying himself ever by the ratline, Monsieur de Bernis half-turned to Pierre, and held out his left hand. The half-caste proffered him a bundle in coarse sailcloth, the natural grey of which was smeared and stained with blood.

Monsieur de Bernis took it, balanced it a moment, and then tossed it forward. It fell at Sir Henry's feet, with a soft thud. The Admiral looked down at it, and then up at Monsieur de Bernis, frowning.

"That's all of him you need," said Monsieur de Bernis. "All of him you asked for. The head, on which you set the price of five hundred pounds."

Sir Henry breathed gustily. "By Jupiter!" His face empurpled. He looked down again at the gruesome bundle from which a stain was slowly spreading on the yellow deck. Then he touched it with a foot that was shod in a gaudily rosetted shoe. He touched it gingerly at first, then kicked it vigorously aside.

"Take that away!" he roared to one of the men who attended him, and upon that gave his attention once more to de Bernis.

"Ye're damned literal, Charles," he snorted.

De Bernis leapt lightly down to the deck.

"Which is only another way of saying that I am as good as my word. Or as good as my boast, if you prefer it. It needs a thief to catch a thief, as Major Sands there thinks they knew who made you Governor of Jamaica."

Sir Henry looked across at Major Sands where he had come to his feet in his bewilderment. He stood beside Miss Priscilla, who remained seated staring, scarcely daring to believe what was suddenly being made plain at least in part.

"Oh? Him!" said Sir Henry. "He thinks that, does he? Bah! And he shrugged the pompons Major out of his further consideration. "We've other things to think of. There's a deal here that needs to be explained."

"You shall have all the explanation you could wish when you've paid me the five hundred for that head, and the other five hundred you wagered me that I could not get it for you."

Morgan made a wry face. "Aye."

HOLLYWOOD. — For all the good it does him, Leslie Howard may as well quit talking about a London vacation. He agreed to do "Berkeley Square," everybody expected that — but now Fox has wheedled him into staying for another picture, the lead opposite Janet Gaynor in "Paddy, the next best thing."

By the time these two roles are completed, the London season will be over and there will be no chance of putting on a play before fall.

The English actor is taking the matter philosophically, not so difficult in view of the salary he draws. But the main thing is he likes Hollywood. He has become one of the film colony's most pronounced addicts of sun bathing and recently made his first appearance on a local polo field.

In pictures of sentiment, the actor is rated without peer by studio heads. He scored heavily in "Smilin' Through" and in Mary Pickford's "Secrets."

The Gaynor-Howard combination will be something entirely new, and ought to be worth watching.

They are telling about a very funny argument Phil Berg had with his gardener.

Phil and Lella Hyams are building a new house. They are very particular about the landscaping — putting in 20-ton oak trees, etc.

The other day the gardener marked off a lot of circles for trees. "How big are those trees going to be?" asked Phil.

The gardener said about four feet.

"Way too small," objected Phil. The gardener drew himself up. "You are like all picture people," he exclaimed. "You have to have everything colossal!"

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

An accusing look brought me over to Sally Eilers at the "King Kong" premiere. "Hoot and I are not made up," she said. "Can't we separate and still be friends?" So old?

When Mrs. Bing Crosby (Dixie Lee) arrived in Hollywood, she went out to Sue Carol's house. Bing and Dixie are expecting a baby in about a month, you know, and she'll stay with Sue until your favorite crooner comes out to Hollywood. And are the fans busy calling Paramount to find out the time of his arrival!

The around-the-world liner, Empress of Britain, will carry many film celebrities when it sails from here this week. Virginia Valli and Charles Farrell have booked passage, also the Ernest Torrence, Sam Raphaelson (he goes to London to write the Jeanette MacDonald-Herbert Marshall picture), Jerry Horwin and Pat O'Bryan, husband of Elizabeth Allen. George Bernard Shaw is a passenger on this vessel, and the film people are keen to meet him.

Lillian Harvey has formally challenged Gary Cooper to a race between their two cars, and he has accepted. It will take place in about a month, probably on Muroc Dry Lake. The Harvey car, one of the show motors of the picture colony, is said to be good for 137 miles an hour. Gary's yellow speed-demon can clock off 125, but he is having the motor especially tuned for the occasion. As his picture is delayed a week, George Raft can now stay back east until April 10.

The fan magazines are narrowing their news headlines to the last minute these days. Walter Ramsey and the salary cut news and a flash on the Crawford-Fairbanks divorce in print seven days after they happened.

Lya De Putti's former secretary wants to do the same work for Dorothea Wieck, new German star. And a plane is said to be bringing Josef Von Sternberg west.

A Thousand Yous....

WHEN you pick up your newspaper and glance over the advertising you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, figuratively speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department of every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading groceries, banks, theatres, all the various places that supply the things that make this the twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousand yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements tell you in a few minutes morning or evening.

Advertisements deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without advertising, the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for small change would make a dollar look like a snowball on the kitchen range.

It pays to read all advertisements in this paper

NO SYMPTOMS OF GOUT IN ATHLETICS CAMP

(Following article on the Philadelphia Athletics is the twelfth of a series on major league baseball prospects.)

By Robert T. Paul
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)
FORT MYERS, Fla., Mar. 29.—(INS)—There are no symptoms of "pennant" in the Philadelphia Athletics camp here this year. The self-satisfied and weary-of-winning attitude which infested the club after three consecutive American League pennants, 1929 to 1931, has been cured by a tonic of youthful aggressiveness and rekindled veteran enthusiasm. Everyone is hustling.

This new spirit has revived the fighting spirit of big George Earnshaw, the hero of the 1929 world series, who last year was accused of indifference to his job. Earnshaw has turned over a new baseball leaf. Somewhat of a clown on the diamond, George today is the most serious athlete in camp. He's been the hardest worker, too, and may be good for 25 victories in the 1933 race.

In addition to Earnshaw, Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg, Connie Mack has two corking southpaws in Gowell S. Claset, a 225 pounder who shows a decidedly fast ball and a change of pace that's baffling, and Tony Freitas, the 23-year-old boy who weighs only 155 pounds yet managed to win 12 games while losing 5 after joining the club late in May last season. Claset pitched great ball for Montreal last year.

Mack won't hesitate to make baseball history by using four southpaws in one series. "I don't care whether a pitcher is right handed or left handed," said Mack today, "so long as he wins."

Mack also has Roy Mahaffey, a right handed veteran of three years; Sugar Cain, who displayed real ability after spending most of last summer with Baltimore; Jim Peterson, former University of Pennsylvania athlete who had a grand year with Portland; Lew Krausse, young Philadelphia who has been carried two full seasons while picking up the weight and experience Connie thinks he needs to develop into a real star; Hank McDonald, 6 feet 3 inch hurler who also was a winner with Portland; Bill Dietrick, bespeckled youth who enjoyed success at Portland and Harrisburg, and Tim McKeithan, who joined the club last June following his graduation at Duke. Of these seven, Mahaffey, Cain, Peterson, Krausse and either Dietrick or McDonald are expected to be retained.

The Athletics will present what Mack predicts will be the best outfield in the American League despite the club's loss of Al Simmons and Mule Haas, who departed with Jimmy Dykes, for the Chicago White Sox. Mack believes Lou Finney, a 23-year-old fly hawk, will make the Philadelphia fans forget Simmons. Finney hit well about 300 with Portland last year. He's tall, rangy and covers more ground than Simmons. In center field will be Roger Cramer, another speed merchant, who displaced Haas in the line-up last June. Cramer today is the finished player bordering on stardom. Ed Coleman, 6 feet 2 inch coast product who broke his ankle in June after stealing the veteran Bing Miller's position, will be in right field.

The surprise of the camp, however, has been Bob Johnson, hard hitting outfielder from Portland. Sent back two years ago because he couldn't hit a curve, Johnson has been soaking everything and driving the ball as far as the mighty Jimmy Foss. Captain Bing Miller will be the fifth outfielder. One new face will be found in the infield. Frank "Pinkey" Higgins, Texas youth who took his finishing course at Portland, will be in Jimmy Dykes' old position at third. Eric McNair will start at short with the veterans Max Bishop on second and Jimmy Foss on first. Bob Williams may be the only reserve infielder as Johnson can fill in at either second or first.

Mickey Cochrane, headed for another big year after hitting in hard luck last season, and Ed Madjeski, 23-year-old resident of Elizabeth, N. J., will be the only catchers.

The A's will have better pitching than last year, a faster moving outfield, an infield that should be an improvement and real catching. The one uncertainty is the attack. If young Finney or Coleman or Higgins can give Foss, Cochrane and Cramer the run driving aid that Simmons did the A's will be dangerous from start to finish. If the youngsters fail, only another brand of super pitching by Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg will keep the A's in the race.

Down the Bowling Alleys

In the three-man tournament match last night Cahall, Amison, Jr., and Brooks won two out of three from Headley, Fine and Blake. Blake was high gun with a total of 573, while Joe Amison, Jr., was the winners' best bet with 547.

SCHMELING HOPES FOR BIG GATE AT HIS BOUT

(This is the second of a series of three articles outlining the views of Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, on the two big heavyweight fights to be held in the next few months, and the future of the boxing game.)

By Walter Dietzel
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Mar. 29.—(INS)—"Hope there will be a good gate and a fine purse for my bout against Max Bauer in New York on June 1st," Schmeling remarked, after he was reassured that the dollar would improve again and that the present banking crisis was more or less a psychosis of fear.

"I am confident that I shall defeat Baer."

"There is not much change in the ranking of heavyweights," Schmeling said when asked what he thought of forthcoming bouts.

"I do not think that people will take much interest in the Sharkey-Carnera fight. The champion will defeat Carnera again, as he badly mauled him up once before. I cannot see anything outstanding in such an issue."

"Simple because Carnera he is a giant. He draws the crowds, but I doubt very much whether the fans will be much interested in a repetition of a Sharkey-Carnera bout."

"Carnera will never become the champion, simply because he is not a first-class heavyweight. He is pretty fast for his weight, but he has the punch of a middle-weight, or perhaps of a light-heavyweight, but that's all."

"I do not know why this is so, but he seems to lack the capacity of quick coordination, which is essential for the prize fighter. A good boxer must make a decision in fractions of a second. Somehow, it seems as if the 'wires' between Carnera's brain and his huge muscles are too long for that."

Assembly Splits Over The Control of Beer

floor last night and the "Pinchot beer bill" was shunted to the ways and means committee. Rep. Morton Witkin, chairman of this group, stated no meeting would be held until next week. This prevents the administration measure from receiving consideration before that time.

Release of the Sowers-Conner bill was the signal for a fight that may cripple the House machinery for many days. The administration bill, drafted as a "harmony" measure, apparently failed in its purpose when legislators admitted they were not wholly in accord with its provisions.

In contrast to the Pinchot bill which prevents a return of the saloon and authorizes the issuance of licenses by the State Department of Revenue, Sowers would set up a license court of three county judges for this purpose. Revenues from the licenses would be paid to the State Treasurer who would allocate the money to the state, county, municipality and school districts. The revenue system set up is 10 per cent to state, a similar amount to the county, and 40 per cent each to municipalities and school districts.

The bill provides for manufacturer's license fees of $1,000. Wholesale distributors in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh would be assessed $500; those in third and fourth class counties, $400; those in all other counties, $300. A graduated license fee is provided for retail distributors with the charges ranging from $75 to $300. Railroads would be charged $500 for all its dining cars while passenger steamboat fees were reduced to $25 per boat.

While the Sowers bill eliminates the saloon, it would permit tap houses and the sale of beer in restaurants or places in which food is served. It makes no provision for general sale of the beverage by all stores on a non-consumption basis, as permitted in the administration regulations.

The expected battle over the regulatory measures led to the general belief that Pennsylvania would be unarmored to meet the sale of the amber fluid on April 7. The Sowers measure, which could be enacted before that date, appeared destined to meet with difficulties that will impede its progress along the road to adoption.

Seven Hundred Jam Court; Hear of Sheriff's Sale

"And you knew this was an official act of the Court, did you not?" Judge Keller asked.

The witness nodded his head, adding that he had come to help the farmers. "How do you expect to help the farmers if you do not respect legal rights?" asked the Jurist.

Smith rose in his seat. "I am not legal minded," he declared. "Furthermore, I am for human rights rather than for legal rights."

David Levinson, Philadelphia, counsel for the farmers, announced his intention to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court if necessary to vindicate the rights of the farmer.

An air of tenseness gripped the crowded court room as arguments were presented. Row upon row of grim visaged farmers listened intently to the testimony.

IST RELIEF BILL TO ASSEMBLY

Harrisburg, Mar. 29.—Despite the controversial subjects which have temporarily hampered the progress of legislation, the General Assembly today was prepared to send its first bill to Governor Pinchot. The Talbot measure, appropriating $2,000,000 to the emergency relief board for April and May was slated for final passage in the Senate. No opposition has been voiced to the appropriation during its legislative journey and the Governor has announced he will sign it immediately. While the Senate worked to bring temporary relief to the destitute the House considered for final passage another Talbot measure providing $22,000,000,000 for aid during 1933-4.

NEW YORK.—(INS)—With President Roosevelt in attendance the new 10,000 ton treaty cruiser, the New Orleans, will be launched in Brooklyn navy yard on April 12. The new ship cost about $11,000,000.

WHERE DO YOU EARN? WHERE DO YOU SPEND?

The HOME TOWN LEAGUE Interviews You---

Where do you earn your money?

"In Bristol".

Where do you spend it?

"In Bristol".

Why?

"Because it helps my own town and gives me more work"

Fine. Now consider the manufacturer whose goods you buy in Bristol stores. Does he earn money here?

"Yes".

Should he spend it here?

"Yes".

Does he actually do it?

"I don't know. I suppose some of them do".

Right. Some of them spend money in Bristol and others don't. Therefore the Courier has organized the Home Town League to push the products of manufacturers who spend in Bristol. Your favorite store is a member of the Home Town League. Patronize him and help Bristol.

Help Bristol and you help yourself.
